OPPOSITION LETTER

To The El Paso Electric Company:

The intention of this letter is to express my opposition for the proposed project that seeks to run a new 345,000-volt transmisión line across the East Side of town. While I recognize the intent behind this initiative, I am deeply concerned about its potential implications and urge you to reconsider its implementation.

First and foremost, the proposal appears to overlook critical aspects that could significantly impact our community. The lack of comprehensive analysis regarding environmental, economic, and social consequences raises a red flag. We must prioritize sustainable and equitable solutions that consider the well-being of all stakeholders.

Moreover, how this proposal was developed seems to have excluded meaningful community input. It is crucial to engage in transparent and inclusive dialogue to ensure that the voices of those directly affected are heard and considered in the decision-making process. Ignoring the perspectives of community members can lead to policies that are neither effective nor fair.

Additionally, there are viable alternatives that have not been fully explored. By investing time and resources in thoroughly examining these options, we can devise strategies that align better wit hboth local and broader interests-methods that foster innovation while safeguarding our environment, society, and community. Iti s our duty to plan for generations to come and will end up being negatively affected by this project.

Sincerely,

Holaya Ponce Acosta
